Development Of Specific Learning Requirement Through Keywords In E-Learning

G.Dharaniya and N.Lakshmi

Abstract

What is available on the Web, their precision for learning is low. It is difficult to express a specific learning requirement through keywords. For example, search engines do a poor job when a learner needs content about "relativity theory", oriented to high school level, with a duration of about 30 minutes. Finding relevant resources can be even more difficult when requirements are not always fully known by the learner, such as her level of competence or adequate technical format. In this paper the authors developed modified methods for specific learning requirement through keywords in E-learning.
